Pence: New law doesn't discriminate

Indiana governor slams 'avalanche of intolerance,' criticism against his state

Associated Press

Indiana Gov. Mike Pence defended the new state law that's garnered widespread criticism over concerns it could foster discrimination against gays and lesbians and said Sunday it wasn't a mistake to have enacted it.

Pence appeared on ABC's "This Week with George Stephanopoulos" to discuss the Religious Freedom Restoration Act he signed last week prohibiting state laws that "substantially burden" a person's ability to follow his or her religious beliefs. The definition of "person" includes religious institutions, businesses and associations.

Since the Republican governor signed the bill into law Thursday, Indiana has been widely criticized by businesses and organizations around the nation, as well as on social media with the hashtag #boycottindiana. Already, consumer review service Angie's List has said it will suspend a planned expansion in Indianapolis because of the new law.

Pence did not answer directly when asked at least six times whether under the law it would be legal for a merchant to refuse to serve gay customers. "This is not about discrimination, this is about empowering people to confront government overreach," he said. Asked again, he said, "Look, the issue here is still is tolerance a two-way street or not."

Sexual orientation is not covered under Indiana's civil rights law. Pence has said he "won't be pursuing that."

The governor told the Indianapolis Star on Saturday that he was in discussions with legislative leaders over the weekend and expects a clarification bill to be introduced in the coming week. He addressed that Sunday, saying, "if the General Assembly ... sends me a bill that adds a section that reiterates and amplifies and clarifies what the law really is and what it has been for the last 20 years, then I'm open to that."

But Pence was adamant that the measure, slated to take effect in July, will stick. "We're not going to change this law," he said.

House GOP caucus spokeswoman Tory Flynn referred questions about those discussions and possible language to the governor's office; it didn't respond to a request for comment Sunday.

Some national gay-rights groups say it's a way for lawmakers in Indiana and several other states where such bills have been proposed this year to essentially grant a state-sanctioned waiver for discrimination as the nation's highest court prepares to mull the gay marriage question.

Supporters of the law, including Pence, contend discrimination claims are overblown and insist it will keep the government from compelling people to provide services they find objectionable on religious grounds. They also maintain courts haven't allowed discrimination under similar laws covering the federal government and 19 other states, including Indiana's neighbors Illinois and Kentucky, two states Pence mentioned specifically. Arkansas is poised to follow in Indiana's footsteps, with a final vote expected next week in the House on legislation that Republican Gov. Asa Hutchinson has said he'll sign.

Josh Earnest, President Obama's spokesman, appeared on "This Week" after Pence, and said the debate isn't a political argument.

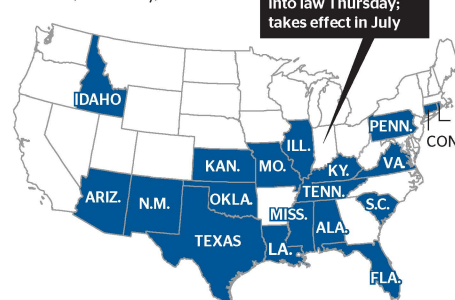

"If you have to go back two decades to try to justify what you're doing today, it may raise questions," Earnest said, referring to the 1993 federal law Pence brought up. He added that Pence "is in damage-control mode this morning and he's got some damage to fix."

COMPARING STATE LAWS ON RELIGIOUS FREEDOM, ANTI-DISCRIMINATION

Like Indiana, Illinois has a religious freedom law which gives special protections to religious objectors, but, unlike Indiana, it also bans discrimination by businesses based on sexual orientation and gender identity.

ANTI-DISCRIMINATION LAWS By state

■ Prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation and gender identity
■ Prohibit discrimination based on sexual orientation only

State Rep. Ed DeLaney, an Indianapolis Democrat, told a large, boisterous crowd Saturday gathered outside of the Statehouse to protest that the law creates "a road map, a path to discrimination." Rally attendees chanted "Pence must go!" several times and held signs that read "No hate in our state."

Pence addressed the critics Sunday, saying:

"This avalanche of intolerance that's been poured on our state is just outrageous."

Asked if he would be willing to add sexual orientation to the list of characteristics against which discrimination is illegal, he said, "I will not push for that. That's not on my agenda, and that's not been an objective of the people of the state of Indiana."

Who should replace Zayn Malik in One Direction?

'Twas the Facebook post read 'round the world through streaks of Cover Girl mascara: Zayn Malik has quit One Direction. Like, officially.

Before you rev up your mom's Honda Odyssey inside the closed garage to let the sweet fumes wash over you like Zayn's smooth voice, take heed. While five minus one equals sad cat emoji, four plus one equals humanity's collective sigh of relief. There's an opening in 1D now, and we have just the people to fill his signature varsity jacket.

RAHM EMANUEL

He's almost in need of a new job, and he's already proven that stress doesn't make him pack up and go home. It just fuels his expletive-laden, Hulk-like transformation. Plus if you need to ask Rahm which way the Eisenhower is, his finger shortage guarantees he'll point you in one direction.

ALMOST-FORMER CONGRESSMAN AARON SCHOCK

Hair. Abs. Scandal. Would anyone even notice that Zayn was replaced? Yes, because Zayn's office is much more "Clarissa Explains It All" than "Downton Abbey."

EITHER ONE OF THE PONCE BROTHERS

While WGN's Dan has the boy band experience in the form of the real-life "Pitch Perfect" a cappella group he founded in college (Straight No Chaser), little bro Antho's no slouch, either. The WMAQ weekend anchorman is also quite an accomplished piano man. You wouldn't go wrong with either of these guys replacing Zayn, except that their actual musical training probably makes them over-qualified.

JAMAL LYON (JUSSIE SMOLLETT) FROM 'EMPIRE'

Because it's well within the realm of things that happen every day for millions of women to pretend that even fake talented gay guys are straight. Cookie, give Simon Cowell a call and tell him you want to take what's rightfully yours.

CUBS PROSPECT KRIS BRYANT

I mean ... it's a no-brainer, right? Nobody's got more hits than this guy.

Fla. council member: ‘We have blood on our hands’

A house party that dissolved into a hail of gunfire and left seven young people hurt has officials on the Florida Panhandle pondering what to do with a spring break season they say has gotten out of control.

David Jamichael Daniels

The raucous parties in the spring break capital of Panama City Beach have had politicians, police and businesses tussling for years over how much to crack down on a key economic force. That debate was revived again when a packed gathering of dancing 20-somethings turned into a sprawling crime scene Saturday. “This is what we’ve been trying to warn people about,” Bay County Sheriff Frank McKeithen said. “It was only a matter of time and it’s only a matter of time until it happens again if we don’t address it.”

During an emergency meeting Saturday, the city council allocated up to $200,000 in additional spending for increased police patrols. But motions introduced by Councilman Keith Curry to ban alcohol on the beach and to roll back the last-call on alcohol sales two hours earlier to midnight were unsuccessful. “We have blood on our hands,” Curry told his fellow council members.

McKeithen had urged the beach alcohol ban and midnight last-call last year, but council members decided against them, instead rolling back last-call from 4 a.m. to 2 a.m. David Jamichael Daniels, 22, of Mobile, Ala., has been charged with seven counts of attempted murder in the shooting and remained at the Bay County Jail. Bond was set on Sunday at $575,000, said Ruth Corley, a spokeswoman for the sheriff’s office. Officials gave no update Sunday on the condition of the victims.

THE QUOTE

“They touched down 1,100 feet short of the runway so I’d say they’re pretty lucky.” —Mike Cunningham, a regional manager for Canada’s Transport Safety Board, talking Sunday about Air Canada Flight AC624 that made a hard landing short of the runway at the Halifax, Nova Scotia, airport during a snowstorm. The plane’s main landing gear, nose cone and an engine sheared off as it skidded on its belly, officials said. The airline said Sunday that 25 people were taken to hospitals for observation and treatment of minor injuries. AP PHOTO/THE TRANSPORTATION SAFETY BOARD OF CANADA

2 bodies found in NY explosion rubble
Emergency workers found two bodies Sunday in the mass of rubble left behind when three apartment buildings collapsed during an apparent gas explosion and fire Thursday in Manhattan’s East Village, police said.

LA light rail running after hitting car
Trains were again running by the University of Southern California early Sunday, a day after a light rail train slammed into a car injuring 21 people, including the train operator and the driver, who was in critical condition.

Arab League unveils joint military force
A two-day Arab summit ended Sunday in Sharm El-Sheikh, Egypt, with a vow to defeat Iranian-backed Shiite rebels in Yemen and the formal unveiling of plans to form a joint Arab intervention force.

BLUE BLOODED

THINK YOU KNOW EVERYTHING ABOUT THE FINAL FOUR TEAMS? YOU MIGHT BE SURPRISED

MICHIGAN STATE (27-11)

How they got there: By playing the under-dog card. Or at least by flying under the radar. Which is not easy for the Spartans to do.
Chicago cred: Gavin Schilling hails from the city and averages 5.2 points and 3.9 rebounds per game.
Celeb cred: Magic Johnson is everywhere Michigan State goes. Nothing like having basketball royalty backing you.
Best name: Freshman guard Lourawls "Tum Tum" Nairn Jr. Speaks for itself.

DUKE (33-4)

How they got there: Mostly by getting to the foul line when the going gets tough.
Chicago cred: Jahill Okafor. You know, the first player to be named ACC freshman and player of the year in the same season.
Celeb cred: Tony Romo has the Blue Devils' back, as does Rob Lowe. We assume actual Rob Lowe, not one of his unnerving DirecTV alter egos.
Best name: Sophomore forward Sean Obl. As in 'Wan Kenobi. Or so we'd like to believe.

KENTUCKY (38-0)

How they got there: All those McDonald's All-Americans has something to do with it. Also, they're way taller than everyone else.
Chicago cred: Freshman guard Tyler Ulis played his high school ball in the south suburbs.
Celeb cred: Ashley Judd is a given. But did you know John Calipari attended Drake's high school graduation?
Best name: Sophomore guard Dominique Hawkins. Rolls off the tongue and is fitting for basketball.

WISCONSIN (35-3)

How they got there: A combination of second-half comebacks and Sam Dekker's daggers late in games.
Chicago cred: Senior center Frank Kaminsky, a Wooden Award finalist, hails from the western suburbs, and Deerfield's Duje Dukan was a Bulls ball boy growing up.
Celeb cred: Aaron Rodgers can't stop tweeting about the Badgers, and he and girlfriend Olivia Munn have been spotted at games.
Best name: Senior forward Duje Dukan, pronounced "DOO-yay DOOK-in." Tough to say, but pretty to look at.

RedEye

Sorry, Cinderella. That includes you, Gonzaga, who still never has been to the Final Four. This year, it's all about big brother.

Uh, as in college basketball powerhouses, not the synonym for an intrusive government.

Anyway, they all are stocked with talented players, top-notch coaches and tons of experience — well, except for Kentucky. So how do you choose whom to back in the biggest games of the year? RedEye is here to help, using categories that might go overlooked.

1	How will we know Jared Allen is ready to have a rebound year for the Bears?	When he has flubber implanted in his butt. Heh-heh. Butt.	When he starts playing more like a Packer and less like a Bear.	When he stops tweeting about bull riding and starts talking football.	Guys, it's Jared Allen, he's 72 years old. C'mon.	The Bears are the last thing in the world anyone cares about right now. Delete that question.
2	What was Bill Belichick thinking when Tom Brady jumped off a cliff?	"cue Darth Vader cry" "NOOOOOOOOOOOOOOOO!"	"You jump, I jump, remember?"	"If he doesn't make it, I got dibs on Gisele."	"Nooooooooooooooooooooo!!!"	Probably that his career would have meant nothing without him. To put it lightly.
3	At what point do you get bored of watching Kentucky win all the time?	Not bored but annoyed at those folks who ask if they could beat the 72-10 Bulls.	Already bored.	Never. Like Anastasia Steele, I enjoy dominance.	2012.	Michigan State is the team to watch. Are you kidding? John Calipari cheats and Tom Izzo flourishes.
4	How much do the L.A. Kings annoy you these days?	As much as those folks who ask if the Kentucky Wildcats could beat the 72-10 Bulls.	Probably not as much as last year ... yet.	All the way down in 8th place in the West? They're not relevant enough to be annoying.	It's LA, they all annoy me.	By being from Los Angeles. Enough said. Also MSU is in the Final Four. Stop asking me questions.
5	Wrigley Field without the bleachers islike Darth Vader without his helmet. Creepy and tragic.	... Wrigleyville without drunken bros.	... a house without bathrooms. They stink a little, but it's not the same without 'em.	... Bucktown without hipsters ... bread without butter ... peanut butter without jelly ... Jay Z without Beyonce. Dave Leitao back for Round 2 at DePaul

Ten years after leaving for Virginia, Dave Leitao returns to DePaul as the men's basketball coach.

Leitao said he didn't understand the promise of DePaul when he left in 2005.

"I underestimated what a special place DePaul University and the city of Chicago are when I left here in 2005," he said in a statement. "The dedication and support here to the growth of student success is second to none, not only for a basketball program but also for the entire student body."

Leitao was 58-34 overall and 30-18 in Conference USA in three seasons as DePaul's coach from 2002-05. He led the Blue Demons to two NIT tournaments and their last NCAA tournament appearance in 2004.

He left DePaul to become head coach at Virginia.

That's how many saves goalkeeper Sean Johnson needed to make Sunday in the Fire's 1-0 win over Philadelphia. The Union fired seven shots, but none on goal. More important, it was the Fire's first win of the 2015 season.

Which health-based job is right for you?

WORKING ON YOUR FITNESS

By Morgan Olsen | FOR REDEYE

IT'S NOT THE '80S, PEOPLE

—fitness jobs don't require neon-colored leotards and working knowledge of a headset microphone. (Though we're not judging, either.) In today's industry, options abound for health and workout enthusiasts who want to elevate their passions and help others. Step 1 in scoring the perfect job: understanding the training and certification process.

Take this totally nonscientific quiz to find out which fitness career is best for you—and get to know a professional who's making it work in Chicago. MORGAN OLSEN IS A REDEYE SPECIAL CONTRIBUTOR.

I'm looking to invest than $1,000 in training and certification.

PERSONAL TRAINER

Lionell Pate

Personal trainer, RightFit Personal Training

His story: Pate's path to personal training began with a lot of questions. As soon as he realized he wanted to work with clients, he consulted successful trainers and managers at his local gym and found that most of them had one thing in common: certification through the National Academy of Sports and Medicine (NASM). Pate opted for the organization's self-study program. "I didn't have time to sit in a classroom, so I decided to do self-study and weekly online quizzes," he said. The certification course required weekly reading and hours of note-taking and tests, and the entire process took him about six months, after which he started an internship at Athletic in Hyde Park. Pate shadowed physical therapists to learn more about how injuries affect movement. "That helped me out tremendously to understand specific issues—knee and hip issues—that my clients deal with," he said. Today, Pate works as an independent trainer for RightFit Personal Training.

Training cost: $800

Advice: "Furthering your education will take you far. It's not just about passing the NASM test. The last thing anyone should do is take the test and feel like they're done. Training is constant. Outside studying is needed to excel in this industry and be able to diagnose clients' problems."

SPINNING INSTRUCTOR

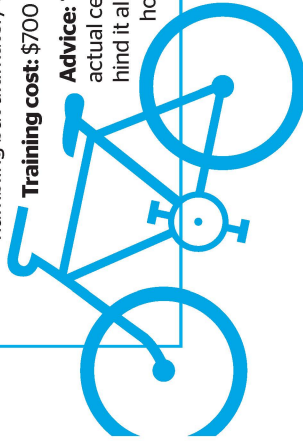

Beth Soria

Indoor cycling and rowing instructor, GO Cycle Fitness

Her story: When Soria and her husband moved to Chicago from L.A. in 2011, she set out to find an indoor cycling studio that could replace her favorite West Coast class. After one hour with GO Cycle's Emmy Rigali, Soria was hooked. "She was so captivating on the bike I decided I really wanted to work with her and use her experience as a part of my development," Soria said. The first step was immersing herself in classes—four to six every week—to learn how teachers articulated instructions. Then, Soria attended a full-day certification session at Mad Dogg Athletics to learn bike mechanics, safety and class design. Later, she completed an online test to become a certified instructor. Following the training, she met with Rigali every week to learn the personal touches: cueing, delivery and music selection. "I was given a list of songs and drills each week that I would present to her and she would help tweak my delivery," Soria said. "It was humbling but ultimately the most effective training I've ever received."

Training cost: $700

Advice: "Find a mentor who you respect and trust and ask them for help. While my actual certification was helpful in understanding the science and mechanics behind it all, my hours spent with Emmy were much more valuable in helping me learn how to teach and how to make it fun."

GROUP FITNESS INSTRUCTOR

Josh Nash

Group fitness instructor, Chicago Athletic Clubs

His story: Nash started teaching fitness classes in Maryville, Mo., when the gym he joined needed instructors. "Someone saw me in a class and asked if I would be interested," he said. "I said, 'yes.' It was that simple." After teaching for a year and a half, Nash decided to invest in special certifications. In the past 20 years, he's been trained in kickboxing, personal training, jump roping, yoga, spinning, Pilates and more. Beyond teaching for Chicago Athletic Clubs—you can find him in Lincoln Park and Lakeview—Nash also trains aspiring instructors for the International Sports Conditioning Association and teaches at Moraine Valley Community College.

Training cost: $1,000 per year on training, conferences and certification renewals.

Advice: "The truth of the matter is a person can get certified to teach group fitness in a single weekend. There are several conferences held throughout the year that offer trainings and certifications. However, getting a certification does not necessarily make someone an effective instructor. To be a good instructor, a person needs much practice."

YOGA INSTRUCTOR

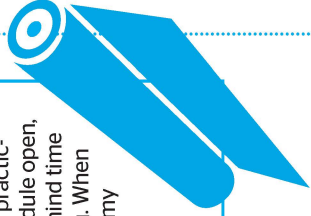

Ali Wadsworth

Manager and yoga instructor, Bare Feet Power Yoga

Her story: Wadsworth practiced yoga for three years before she jumped into teacher training at Yogaview in Lincoln Park. She opted for their 200-hour certification program, which required practicing yoga several times per week, attending workshops, meditating daily, completing homework assignments and reading historical and scientific materials. She recently started her 500-hour certification—the master's degree of yoga instruction—which includes more intense workshops and immersion training. "Most studios do not specifically require this, but these teachers often have more experience and knowledge to share with students and are highly valuable to a studio," she said.

Training cost: $4,000 for the initial training and $2,500 on continued education.

Advice: "When going into your training, do it completely. Expect most of your free time to be spent studying, practicing or reading while training. Keep your social schedule open, don't overbook yourself and allow your body and mind time to digest all of the information that you are learning. When I began my training, I pretty much said goodbye to my boyfriend, friends and family for three months and looked forward to dedicating my full self to becoming a yoga teacher."

PHYSICAL THERAPIST

Hunter Van Houten

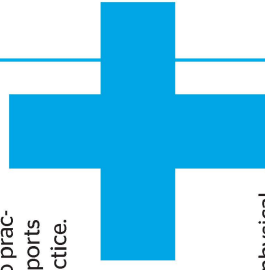

Physical therapist, Lakeshore Sports Physical Therapy

Her story: After completing an undergraduate degree in applied health sciences at Bowling Green State University, Van Houten received his doctorate of physical therapy from Northwestern in 2013. "I was surprised at how quickly my years in school passed," he said. "When you hear seven years, it seems like a long time. However, it goes by so quickly and you learn so much." To advance to the working world, he had to pass the National Physical Therapy Examination, which is required in all 50 states. With a greenlight to practice, Van Houten found a job at Lakeshore Sports Physical Therapy, an orthopedic private practice. But his education isn't over; Van Houten said he'll always invest in ongoing education to stay relevant in his practice.

Training cost: Nearly $200,000 for undergraduate and graduate education and housing.

Advice: "I would recommend shadowing a physical therapist for a day or several days to really understand all that encompasses what a physical therapist does. For those looking on deciding which physical therapy program to attend, it is important to know the values of a certain program and how closely they align with one's own values."

Ryley Walker

ALBUM REVIEW

Primrose Green
Ryley Walker

strummed songs with copious amounts of banjo, the 25-year-old, Rockford-born singer-songwriter plays music that unfolds like freewheeling jazz—with the energy and abandon of punk rock. On his stellar new album “Primrose Green,” the songs constantly shift, buoyed by Walker’s crate-digging love for genre-bending acts like Tim Buckley, Van Morrison, Fairport Convention and John Fahey, not to mention a few relatively obscure others. These aren’t the usual touchstones for an artist in his mid-20s (aren’t younger folkies just supposed to name-drop Bob Dylan and move on?); Walker’s sophisticated taste and astounding execution suggest a musician with experience and wisdom beyond his years. Where the breezy, often-downbeat folk offerings on his 2014 album “All Kinds of You” showcased his prowess with the acoustic guitar, “Primrose Green” is a more collaborative effort thanks to contributions from

By Josh Terry

REDEYE SOUND BOARD
These days, the term “young folk artist” typically implies mountain-man affectations and cute ukuleles. Fortunately, that’s not the case with Ryley Walker.

Rather than specializing in earnest, preciously local jazz and experimental talent including guitarist Brian Sulpizio, pianist Ben Boye, drummer Frank Rosaly and many more.

The result is expansive, inviting and layered. Like a modern take on Morrison’s “Astral Weeks,” the opening title track starts off with a pastoral acoustic riff before spiraling into a vibrant, ‘60s-inspired folk song. A prominent upright bass line opens the sprawling “Summer Dress,” which eventually swells in volume to a blissful instrumental freakout. Walker’s a commanding guitarist, expertly fingerpicking and weaving 12-string acoustic chords throughout his music, specifically on the ambling, rustic instrumental “Griffiths Bucks Blues” or on the frenzied rush of intensity “Sweet Satisfaction,” the album’s standout track and one of the best folk songs of the year. The lyrics—touching on earthy and often-abstract subjects British folk singers tend to emphasize—aren’t as strong as the music but don’t weaken the overall product.

Make no mistake, Ryley Walker is the full package. His booming voice channels Buckley’s pristine warble (see the ridiculous range he displays on “Same Minds”), and his many ad-libs and vocalizations emulate Morrison’s charismatic band-leading. No, retro folk music isn’t currently in style in Chicago or anywhere, but the wonderfully loose, captivating “Primrose Green” shows Walker is comfortable carving out his own niche.

Paul McCartney is not too old to headline Lolla

By RedEye staff

When Sir Paul McCartney performs July 31 during this year's Lollapalooza, he will be, at 73, the oldest headliner since the music festival began in 1991. But while the former Beatle is getting up there, he isn't that old by recent Lolla or festival standards.

RedEye compiled the ages of every performer in the six top-billed acts from the past five Lollapalooza lineups (2011-2015) in Chicago. The average age of the headlining performers was roughly 37 years old—even when McCartney was removed from the equation.

With an average age of 43, this year's lineup is the oldest crop of headliners, but not by much. The average age of headliners in 2012 was about 40 years old.

These numbers shouldn't be a huge surprise. The 2015 festival season is proving that lineups filled with tenured musical legends have become the norm. Billy Joel (66 years old) is headlining this year's Bonnaroo Music and Arts Festival on June 11-14 in Manchester, Tenn. AC/DC, with founding member Angus Young (60), and Steely Dan, with core members Walter Becker (65) and Donald Fagen (67), are playing Coachella Valley Music and Arts Festival on April 10-12 and 17-19 in Indio, Calif.

The culture of summer music festivals often has shown that any marquee event will have a palatable mix of artists both young and old. At recent Lollapalooza fests, headliners have included elder statesmen Black Sabbath in 2012 and the Cure in 2013 buoyed by a mix of younger draws like Mumford &

Sons and Skrillex.

This year's Lolla lineup isn't an exception. McCartney is a stark contrast to Sam Smith, who will be 23 years old by the time he performs Aug. 1 at the festival. Smith is the youngest Top-6 headliner of the past five festivals.

The youngest Lolla bill tallied? In 2014, artist ages averaged out to about 32 years old. Eminem, 41 at the time, was the most senior, while Skrillex, at 26 years old, was youngest.

Perhaps to appeal to older audiences, McCartney is more likely to play stadiums than festival grounds. But he did have a successful headlining set at Bonnaroo in 2013. Despite media outlets falling for sarcastic "Who is Paul McCartney?" Twitter jokes, McCartney remains one of the most ubiquitous and entertaining musicians alive. Even after 60 years in the musical spotlight, he's able to charm all sorts of audiences. He was a Beatle, after all.

It goes without saying, age doesn't dictate quality.

However, if you wrongly think Macca is just a lame geezer, go see whippersnappers The Weeknd, who will be 25 for his July 31 Lolla performance, and Sam Smith instead.

Editor's note: All artist ages listed are according to performance date, not current day. Our analysis does not include Jimmy Tamborello of the Postal Service or Sam White of Florence and the Machine because they are vampires. (They're not. Or so we think. We couldn't find official sources for their ages.)

HOROSCOPES

TAROT.COM

Aries March 21-April 19
You could be feeling skittish if you feel cornered, but overreacting likely won't produce a positive result. It's smarter to relax and listen to your heart than dream about being somewhere else.

Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23
You may be feeling quite confident about your current plans now, but something still is gnawing away in the dark at the back of your mind. Trust your heart to lead you in the right direction.

Taurus April 20-May 20
Your unwavering determination is your greatest strength as you continue to express your love today, even in the face of an emotionally confusing situation. Aim deep and you won't be led off track by unimportant issues.

Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 21
Your unexpressed anger can morph into resentment. Letting go and acting on your intuition is easy if you can relinquish your fears first. Following your instincts now is your best insurance against fostering negativity.

Gemini May 21-June 21
You are able to maintain your balance today while lured into unknown emotional territory. However, you may have to share your feelings, even if you're uncertain about how someone else will react to your disclosure.

Sagittarius Nov. 22-Dec. 21
Your sense of self-worth and net worth are inextricably intertwined today. You might want to consider cashing in on your newfound confidence and asking for a raise or a promotion.

Cancer June 22-July 22
You might sink into a dark mood today as you attempt to reveal your secrets to a trusted ally. Ironically, taking responsibility for your feelings allows your dissatisfaction to transform into an appreciation of the love in your life.

Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19
Your involvement in a creative project or a new romance may be intensifying, and you're tempted to go overboard. This can be quite a memorable day as long as you don't struggle to accomplish the impossible.

Leo July 23-Aug. 22
You could grow annoyed with people being so nice to you now because their support of your life plan just doesn't feel real. Thankfully, you have a chance to realize that you can be strong and yielding at the same time.

Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 18
It's refreshing to feel so creative today and exciting to believe that things could get even better during the next few days. Use your keen ability to shift between the light-hearted and heavy-handed extremes.

Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22
It doesn't matter if you're incredibly smart or if you have all the right data now; it's just plain foolhardy to ignore your feelings. Having more facts won't help since you already know in your gut what you must do.

Pisces Feb. 19-March 20
You may be afraid that the negativity of someone at work might grow into more of a problem during the days ahead. If you really want to pre-empt potential trouble, ask thoughtful questions and be an active listener as well.

The duplicating 'Dead'

AMC's much buzzed-about companion series to hit zombie drama "The Walking Dead" now has a name. Ready? Wait for it: ... "Fear the Walking Dead." Not the most original title we've ever heard, but with the action for this spinoff set in L.A. and a lot of crazy stuff going down in the original—which wrapped up its fifth season on Sunday night—that could use some additional context, it'll have to do. Bring on the walkers.

THE DIGIT

That's how much the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences dropped on the Aries 1B Trans-Lunar Space Shuttle from "2001: A Space Odyssey" at a Hollywood prop auction on Saturday, Variety reports. The model can be seen in the 1968 Stanley Kubrick classic transporting William Sylvester's character from the International Space Station, and it's one of the only props from the film Kubrick didn't purposely destroy. The shuttle will be added to the Academy's collection for its upcoming Academy Museum of Motion Pictures, set to open in late 2017. Construction on the space reportedly will begin next week.

Stewart's stand-in?

Personally, we're still in denial that Jon Stewart will be vacating his "Daily Show" desk, but when the inevitable happens, deadline.com is saying they've got the inside scoop on his replacement. The site claims a source named relatively new "Daily Show" correspondent (and one-time RedEye cover boy) Trevor Noah as Stewart's most likely successor, though Comedy Central is "still having conversations with others about the gig." Interesting. Very interesting.

HOT DATE

NOV. 6

That's when James Bond returns to the big screen in "Spectre." Released late Friday, the flick's first trailer leads us to believe this installment will include some mysterious backstory on 007's childhood, an ominous character that certainly sounds like Christoph Waltz and Bond being his usual brooding, super sexy self.

The summer of George!

In his pre-"Curb Your Enthusiasm" days, Larry David loosely based "Seinfeld" character George Costanza on himself. So it's only appropriate that when David wraps up his Broadway run in the comedy "Fish in the Dark," the actor who brought George to life will again be filling David's socially awkward shoes. Jason Alexander steps into David's lead role at New York's Cort Theatre on June 9, thr.com reports. "Not only was I fortunate enough to write for Jason Alexander on 'Seinfeld,' but I also had a ringside seat watching his brilliant, indelible performances," David said told the site. "Needless to say, I was thrilled when I heard he was replacing me in 'Fish in the Dark.' Finally I can enjoy the show."

THE QUOTE

"Voices ... tell you you're not good enough, that you have to look a certain way, act a certain way, that if you speak up, you're too loud. If you step up to lead, you're being bossy. ... Live life on your own terms. Anyone who has achieved anything in life, knows challenges and failures are components of success."

—First lady Michelle Obama, speaking Saturday at BET's 2015 Black Girls Rock! event, according to eonline.com. The ceremony, which also featured Jennifer Hudson, Will and Jada Pinkett Smith, "Selma" director Ava DuVernay and actress Cicely Tyson, will air on BET on April 5.
